It was truly a season Sent From Above! After finishing 41 games behind Seattle in 2001, and starting 2002 with a 6-14 record out of the gate, no one looked at the Anaheim Angels as serious championship material. But, with new manager Mike Scioscia and his staff preaching a fresh playing style and a winning attitude to his cast of talented no-names and baseball outcasts, the team bucked all odds and took home the World Series trophy in October!

To commemorate their magical season, this poster features nine key players from the squad (Tim Salmon, Garrett Anderson, Troy Percival, Troy Glaus, Jarrod Washburn, Adam Kennedy, Darrin Erstad, David Eckstein, Scott Spiezio), the official team and World Series logos, a truly heavenly design, and that unbelievable title, "2002 World Series

Champions". A stunning piece for your wall, a must for any long-suffering Angels fan, and a great collector's item for years to come!
