Rancho San Joaquin

Located in Irvine, California, Rancho San Joaquin was Irvine's first public golf course. Set along a coastal inlet with four different lakes as a backdrop, it is home to some of South Orange County's finest and most challenging greens. Designed by William Francis Bell, Rancho San Joaquin opened in 1964, and is only minutes away from John Wayne Airport—conveniently accessible to travelers and those on the go. The course is welcoming for new golfers while still offering a good challenge for more experienced players.
